Dear parent/carer

Next half term, we will hold the end of year exams for students in Years 7-9. These exams typically cover the content from the whole academic year to date and take place during regular lessons.

In the majority of subjects, these exams will take place in the final 2 weeks (11-22 May). For English and history, they will be more spread out to support the marking load of the teachers and to increase the availability of teaching assistants to support with some of our students with additional needs.

We know that many of you will wish to support your child(ren) at home in their preparation for these examinations. Further information on content and assessment expectations can be found in the subject areas on our website - Finham Park School - Home. Subject leaders/teachers may also contact you separately with further information about their subject areas, and students will be advised in their lessons about the steps they need to take to prepare.

One of the things shared at our autumn parent forum was a request that more information is provided on our website about what students cover in their different subject areas – along with advice/suggestions for how to support students at home. This is something that our subject leaders will be looking at over the course of the summer term.

Kind regards
